Mañana te vas a Aarhus a entregar material." Menos de 24 horas después estoy sentada en una furgoneta enorme repleta de equipo, con la lista de Spotify sonando y los sándwiches para las tres horas de viaje en la mochila, teniendo mi primera conversación con la policía danesa. Que qué hago parada en medio de la autopista. Menos mal que aquí todo el mundo habla inglés.

"You're going to Aarhus tomorrow to deliver some equipment." Less than 24 hours later I'm sitting in a huge van filled with flight cases, my Spotify roadtrip list booming out of the speakers and the sandwiches I'd prepared for the three-hour long trip in my bag,

La incertidumbre que se vive en Kamera Udlejningen (he aprendido a escribirlo sin mirar) se asemeja a la del parte metereológico en Dinamarca: en la empresa no sabes si vas a estar recogiendo BNCs o cogiendo un vuelo a Oslo. En el país mejor salir de casa con chubasquero, pantalones cortos, botas de montaña y pamela, que no vas a acertar pongas lo que te pongas.

having my first conversation with a Danish policeman. Why have I stopped in the middle of the motorway, he asks. It's just as well everybody speaks English here. The uncertainty that reigns in Kamera Udlejningen (I've finally learnt how to spell it) reminds me of the weather forecast in Denmark: at the company you don't know if you'll be rolling BNC cables up or flying off to Oslo; as to the climate you're better off wearing a raincoat, shorts, mountain boots and a sun hat, you'll never get it right.

My experience in Estonia is being wonderful, I have to say that without any shadow of a doubt luck has struck to make this possible. Firstly I've travelled here with my adventure partner Javier Sanchez, this has made the adaptation to the changes much easier. Moreover it's been really easy to find a flat, and not any flat but an incredible house.

We have met local people who little by little are becoming our friends, I'm sure that some of them will remain in our lives after this trip.

Talking about the area of work the experience can not be better. We have got a great boss, Leho, who is an amazing teacher and a good friend. The internship it is being really interesting and fulfilling, every day en nuestras vidas al finalizar el viaje. En el plano laboral la experiencia es insuperable. Tenemos un gran jefe, Leho, el cual es a partes iguales gran maestro y buen amigo. Las prácticas están siendo muy interesantes y enriquecedoras, cada día ampliamos nuestros conocimientos y afianzamos conceptos del día a día laboral. Nuestras responsabilidades van aumentando progresivamente y las producciones que realiza la empresa Levira son de primer nivel, sin duda las mejores prácticas que podía pedir our knowledge grows and we consolidate concepts of every working day. Our responsibilities are becoming more important every day and the productions that our company "Levira" makes are top class, surely the best internship I could ask for.
